CANNERY BURNED.

He Was to Have Begun Operations

Very Shortly.

(Special Dispatch to The Times.)

CREWE, VA., August 13.—The cannery of Captain W. L. Worsham was entrely destroyed by fire here to-day shortly after noon. The cannery was situated at the rear of his dwelling, in the northern part of the town and was about ready to be of the town, and was about ready to be-gin operations, a large supply of tin cans having been received there only a day or two ago. The estimated loss was about $700, without any insurance. Captain Worsham was until a few months ago a conductor on the Norfolk and Western Railway, but was so badly hurt about the back and spine in a recent acc dent that the physicians say he will never be able to return to his railroad work, so he decided to start this cannery, and hoped to realize from it the principal support for his family. The fire is thought to have originated from a defective fluc. The dwelling was for a time in danger, but owing to the promptness of the fire company and the citizens in answering the alarm it escaped undamaged.
